

The Dragon and the Lamb

A great red dragon walked the land with a mouth that smelled like death.
He crashed across God's good earth with his fiery breath.

But the Lion of Judah stood upon the land,
Roaring out the love of God and the dragon ran from the Lamb.

The garden children shook in fear with terror in their eyes.
Guilt and shame crashed in on them when they listened to the dragon's lies.
But the Lion of Judah stood upon the land,
Roaring out the love of God and the dragon ran from the Lamb.

That dragon knows his time is short; his efforts are all lost.
A Lion's shadow's choking him: the shadow of a cross.
And the Lion of Judah stands upon the land,
Roaring out the love of God and the dragon runs from the Lamb.

Yes the Lion of Judah stands upon the land,
Roaring out the love of God and the dragon runs from the Lamb.
